Crisis Management

"I was struggling with a number of issues at the beginning of my sophomore year. I worked with a great counselor at C&PS, who gave me a safe space to sort out all of my thoughts and give me non-biased advice. My counselor gave me confidence and made me feel like myself again. I don't think I could have gotten through my sophomore year without it."

"I was planning on transferring home for the way I was feeling, but with the service provided I have decided to stay here to further my education and I have a much more positive mindset all together."

"... unfortunately some of my friends who needed help from C&PS were not able to receive it, due to high wait time for appointments. If there is one thing that C&PS could do to improve their services, then please do bring in more counselors."

Center for Intercultural Relations

"The Pride Center has been my home since I came to SDSU. Without it I'd never have such a strong community bond or be as involved on campus. The work it does in creating space, offering support, and providing education is indispensable."

"The WRC is a home. Yeah it's a center, but it's such a safe and welcoming place to be. It has a couch you can nap on and then a living room where you can share your thoughts on the day or your life. There's a room full of endless eye opening literature, but most importantly it's the community of people at the WRC who have helped me to feel like I belong at SDSU."

"As a transfer student who was new to SDSU, the BRC quickly became my second home. Although Black folks are only 4% of the campus, the BRC is somewhere I feel like I can be myself and feel supported by my peers. This is a place for us to thrive together and motivate each other at all times whether that is to study, socialize, or just connect with one another."
